Noah Mifsud presented a mural that he and two colleagues would like to paint in the 500 hall. It is a whimsical, modern image with the theme of "Art has no rules." We liked it.

Student council report

Student council volunteered with bags of love, an organization that puts together bags of clothing and other treats for needy children. This was one of their many volunteer projects student government engage in. They are still working on the grad party and hoping to finalize that after spring break. Upcoming is a book drive, and then prom.

Bobbie is hoping to work with Student government to continue to improve school assemblies. Lynette noted that assemblies have been a bit of a struggle this year, with over-committed student government leaders planning them. She said that advance, and clear planning with various clubs and teams would be helpful in creating better assemblies. She also noted that she wants teachers to be very honest when filling out recommendations for student government applications.

Parent council report

Tana let us know that for the grad party, they have received the bid from Teen Casino and it sounds like there is a lot of fun planned. At this point she is just waiting on a signature and a check.

There was a great parent education meeting about drug abuse. There has been a big increase this year in drug related incidence at school, particularly in distribution. Students at the meeting spoke honestly, and the meeting was very informative.

Admin update

SmarterBalance testing is running along, much more smoothly than last year. Last year our participation rate was under 50%. This year only 19 kids opted out.

Staffing is happening. A master schedule is coming together.

Next meeting

Bobbie told us that the SIP is morphing into CAP (Comprehensive Achievement Plan) It's time for us to start looking at goals, and it's likely that they will unfold over the next few months.

Good of the Order

Student government is hoping to move the guide period for student elections to April 27.

Julia Chou's fabulous space cat mural proposal is being moved from the 300 hall to a less central location.
